To Whom it May Concern:

I am NOT a gun owner at this time. I do, however, follow the gun (and other) contested debates in today's culture.

I fundamentally oppose this sort of legislation designed merely to allow politicians of every stripe to say they "protected citizenry." Common sense dictates that a tax of this nature would do no good protecting innocents against someone with a gun (or a car, or a bat, etc) who wishes to do harm against another. Equally abhorrent is proposed litigation against gun manufacturers. Further, this tax would disproportionately affect licensed POC in unsafe neighborhoods who choose to protect their families. This is typical "feel good" legislation, to no good end.
