

To whom it may concern,

As a mother of 4 and a registered dietitian I find it essential to support a change and eliminate the tax on breastfeeding supplies.

The research clearly supports breastfeeding for all who are able with numerous benefits to both mother and baby!

We should be pushing for more preventive medicine to reduce long term and unnecessary medical costs. Breastfeeding has been shown to do this with improved infant immunity, reduced diabetes risk and improved weight for both, as well as a reduction in breast cancer rates for mom.

It is a women's right to breastfeed and making sure that is financially possible is a must.

Make the right decision and drop the tax!

Sincerely,
Allison Giguere
Clinton, CT resident

Sent from Samsung Galaxy smartphone.