

I am writing in support of SB113

Although I am not a resident of Connecticut, I am a mother who lost a child to adoption in 1964 (reunited in 1986) and am very passionate about the absolute right of every person to his or her own personal birth information. I have spent the past 30 years of my life, full-time since retirement 13 years ago, advocating for adoption reform, adoptee and parental rights, and providing Search Angel services free of charge.

I have personally facilitated more than 1,500 adoption reunions in the past 13 years. Since the advent of autosomal DNA (atDNA) testing, within the past six years, we are now solving searches at a mind-boggling rate. I personally average seven searches solved a week, and I am only one of hundreds of Search Angels. In this new age of information technology, there simply is no credible reason to keep adoptees' birth records locked up in bureaucratic secrets and lies.

From my experience and knowledge, more than 95% of the mothers are happy to be found and look forward to having their lost children back in their lives.

However, ultimately this bill is not about search and reunion; it is about the absolute right of adoptees to be free of state-imposed discrimination and oppression by the sealing of their OBCs. What they choose to do with their personal information is their private business. The public and the State have no more right to intrude into their lives and question their motives for wanting their personal birth information than we do in anyone else's who was not adopted.

This is such an important piece of legislation that is way overdue for passage. As a basic human right, adopted people deserve the opportunity enjoyed by every other citizen of saying, "I know" instead of "I wonder." We have the examples and experiences of several other states that have restored dignity, justice and respect to people whose records were sealed because of adoption – NY, OR, AL, ME, NH, RI, IL, OH, MO, IN, CO, WA, NJ, PA, MT, among them - where tens of thousands of adopted persons have received their original birth certificates with no negative repercussions whatsoever.

I hope that CT legislators will now step up and do the right thing.
