There's no reason for the state to destroy jobs for the sake of creating a system that at best would assist low income citizens. There are better ways to achieve that goal. Government is NOT the solution to all so called injustices. There are much better avenues toward that end. Education is at the top of that list. Education begins at home, at birth. Government avoids getting personal with it's citizens, subjects on ethics, morality and civility can be incorporated into civic duty. However, civic duty isn't even emphasized in the lowest educational grades. Wisdom and logic are the farthest experience of political education. Emotion is the main stay of political education. One must present his case in a polite, refined and dignified manner or he won't be heard by the élite. I've never had a response with the many times I presented my argument politely. Many times, many times. Hello, hello, is anyone home?
