

The government should never run any business, especially not health care.

I can no longer afford health care since government health care has been forced on U.S. citizens. Before government health care I had private health care it cost $433.00 a month with a $500.00 deductible, it had very good coverage of health care costs. Now my cost is $930.00 a month with a $9500.00 deductible and terrible coverage of costs after paying this enormous amount of money that is why I cannot afford health care in this country.

My understanding is, the main reason for the government to take over healthcare is because U.S. citizens with pre-existing conditions could not afford the cost of health care coverage, if the government believes they need to be involved in health care costs there job is to regulate not run it and do so prudently.

If the federal government made all major healthcare insurance providers shoulder the pre-existing health cost burden by the size of the insurer computed in dollars or number of insured keeping pre-existing patients costs in line with non-pre-existing insurance costs we could have avoided the skyrocketing costs we have now with government run insurance or the government could have put aside a fund for U.S. citizens with pre-existing health problems that U.S. citizens could apply for to keep the costs in line with non- pre-existing U.S. citizens.

Sincerely
Alfred Gerner
