

Requiring employment for access to health care is a humanitarian crisis. That someone should lose their ability to see a doctor for fear that the financial repercussions will be too grave is a devastating insight into the greed and general disregard for human life by the state of Connecticut and its representatives. Provide a public option immediately. In any circumstance it's the only humane option, and especially now this is an easy choice.

Matt Higgins
Hartford county