

Read your statement and you are right in what you say but you never mention better health care. I have extensive friends in Europe and Canada who all are so happy with their system for having accessible health care for all. In the USA it is more focused on high paying jobs in insurance and high paying jobs in the medical field.

I have been republican for most of my life and my parents were medical people. So my quality of life has been exceptional but I have come to learn that we simply don't have the best health care system which ultimately is what counts. I happen to fall into a category where I have good health care but I know so many people who struggle with life changing health problems and their situations stink. Some think has to change and maybe you can help But I don't see anything promising in your statements.

Sincerely,
Vic Mulaire
Weston Ct