Dr. Brian P. Conner

Chiropractic Physician

Telehealth is a vital and important part of the chiropractic profession especially during these trying times of the COVID-19 global pandemic. Obviously, we can't adjust over the phone, but weight management, nutrition, supplements and herbs fall under the chiropractic scope of practice in CT. Also, rehab including stretches, exercises and strength training falls under our scope. Telehealth visits saved my patient's health last year. I was able to keep them from going to the ER for unnecessary visits by reviewing different pain management techniques and therapies. I was also able to discuss diet and exercise plans with them over the phone or using HIPAA compliant video chat software from Optimantra. I was able to email and review stretching and exercise videos from ChiroUp with patients so that their health could continue to improve even though they weren't coming into the office. Since I believe I've given valid reasons above, please continue to keep chiropractic in the telehealth bill.

Respectfully submitted,

Brian P. Conner, DC
