Testimony:

This proposed legislation raises a key question: If your daughter was pregnant, wouldn't you want to know and be part of the decision-making conversation regarding whether your grandchild was born or aborted?

As far as I can see, the answer to the above question transcends issues connected to formal religions and mere political maneuvering — instead, the answer rests in common sense. In February 1776, just months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, a gentleman named Thomas Paine published a momentous pamphlet called "Common Sense" — and in my view, the answer to the above query is likewise a matter of simple common sense.

Do you see the same common-sense solution that I see in conjunction with this primal and pivotal issue? I hope Connecticut lawmakers require doctors and minors to notify parents when a minor child seeks pregnancy-related health care services.
