CT allows college students to vote in their college town. Most other states do NOT! Other states take the position that the student is a resident of the town they lived in when they applied to go to the college. This, they should register to vote in the town where they live when not attending school.

Residents' vote is negated by the vote of college students who don't own property or businesses in the town. Their children don't attend our local primary schools. Students often aren't aware of the local issues that concern residents
