

Good Afternoon,

I am writing to express my sincere hopes that security in our Connecticut schools may be greatly improved. As a Newtown, Ct., resident and a grandparent of Newtown school children I firmly believe that along with gun control and mental health issues, the task of improving the safety of our school facilities is paramount.

Obviously the costs of making our schools safe for all will be very expensive. I believe that those costs are clearly worth the monies that need to be allocated.

My strong suggestion would be to visit some of our large Connecticut corporations, buildings in NYC, and those outside our area as well. There are security procedures and stop gaps in place in large business buildings that have been extremely well thought out. They have been implemented and have been proven effective.

I implore you to make it impossible for us or any other community in Connecticut to have to endure the losses that we suffered on Dec. 14, 2012.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Katherine Geckle
