

Thank you for your efforts to make CT schools safer. I am the husband and father of people who work in schools, my wife is a school psychologist and my daughter is a special ed teacher. I strongly recommend that there be an armed security presence in schools. Such an authority figure is good for children to see, and would do much to even the emotional tone of argumentative and combative parents and students—not to mention being a hedge against the highly unlikely yet possible active shooter scenarios. I know that this is an expensive proposal, but it should be made a required extension of each CT municipal police department's mission.

Our kids (and teachers) are worth protecting. Regards, Tom Kolditz
