

I am an Alaskan who was born and raised in Connecticut. The second amendment was put into place, with the help of some of my Connecticut ancestors, as an instrument to protect the people from the potential of, simply put, bad government. Destroying the rights of honest people to own firearms with or without high capacity magazines is in fact bad government and will do nothing but create a black market where criminals intent on having them in their possession to do bad things will thrive. It will take guns out of the hands of good honest law abiding citizens as well. You can make all the feel good laws you want to but it will not prevent bad people from doing what they have always done over the centuries. Bad people will continue to do bad things.

Thank you,
Jeff Alling
North Pole, Alaska