Aside from the disregard for our second amendment rights, I think the people who believe that a law that would limit the type of firearms or size of magazines that law abiding gun owners can purchase would have any effect on the violent crimes in this state have a problem with logic. If criminals don't obey laws then the only people that these laws would have any effect on would be the people who pose no threat. We already have laws against murder which pretty much covers the problem. A consequence of of these proposed laws to those that would obey them and who might be faced with defending themselves is that they are at a handicap with those who don't obey the laws. I get a 5 round revolver, the attacker gets 30 rounds in his semi-auto.
