

To Whom It May Concern:

I am a lifelong Connecticut resident and I would like to take this opportunity to voice my concern with the current state of Connecticut's gun control laws. While some may argue that Connecticut has some of the strictest gun control laws in the country and therefore we need do nothing I would argue that the laws that Connecticut currently has are clearly not prohibitive enough and it is time to rethink what is an acceptable level of risk to the citizenry of this fine state (I'm not sure where you need to live in Connecticut to possibly need more than a revolver to protect your family and property or a rifle (without automatic or semi-automatic functionality) to hunt for pleasure).

Please use all your power to curb the availability of guns that have the means to cause mass killings, if not by a law restricting their availability then perhaps by a tax that makes their cost somewhat equal to their destructive capabilities.

Thank you,
Kathleen
