

Dear Sir/Madam,

Connecticut needs much stronger gun control immediately. As a former British Army officer it is clear to me that those who claim that the ready availability of automatic weapons and assault rifles somehow keeps the local population safe are in fact critically endangering our families. It feels as though the the Armoury doors of a military compound are open and the quartermaster is absent. The State Government should regulate, instruct and serve as the quartermaster. The State Government is responsible if those Armoury doors are not closed. The State Government must take action now and serve as an example to the rest of the country about how to keep military grade and automatic weapons off our streets in order to keep our children safe.

Sincerely,

Philip Carr,
A CT resident
