

I would like to see a change in many things related to gun violence but at the top of list would be:

1. Increased and more stringent background checks for gun owners
2. An immediate ban on the sale high-capacity ammunition clips
3. Tougher laws preventing gun trafficking
4. More discussion and information shared on what guns are categorized as assault weapons and how they have been altered to become a weapon in a mass shooting, this seems to be the sticking point in both sides of the debate and deserves to be discussed and understood by all sides in this debate.
5. More education in our schools about the dangers of guns and other solutions to solving problems through violence

I am mother of a 1st grader in the state of CT and will forever remember December 14th, personally I don't own or want a gun but I respect others 2nd Amendment rights. Overall I think more needs to be said to increase the support of responsible gun owners on these gun prevention initiatives. There is a middle ground and we are all standing in it at this very moment, I believe we all want change and we all want the violence and the shootings to stop regardless of who we vote for or how many guns or types of guns we own or don't choose to own. Common sense gun laws needs to become a phrase that makes sense to everyone.

Thank you,
