

Given the emotions over the senseless slaughter in Newtown one can understand the move to restrict gun owner rights. After all we are an easy target. We believe in the words and intent of the 2nd amendment and rights described in the state constitution. We believe the words have meaning then and now.

In today's society the ruling class seems to have gained the upper hand. Citizens have forgotten the reasons we exist or they have gotten so used to be taken care of they don't care or both.

We live with sadness for our future and future of our children in a society that has become conditioned to taking from those who have to give to those who don't. Given these circumstances it is not surprising that the ruling class has decided that they must "take a stand" and further erode the rights of the law abiding to satiate their constituents.

Make no mistake limiting the rights of those who are responsible will do nothing to prevent another Newtown.

In fact Adam Lanza would consider the new limitations a challenge. As he acted out the video game the limitation on magazine size would have just been another hurdle to overcome on the way to obtain the high score.

We should have expected no less from those who choose the release violent criminals in the name of compassion or eliminate the death penalty that would have applied to Adam Lanza if he chose not to go out on top.
