

My suggestion is that doctors and teachers be required to report suspected mental issues with students as they are required in cases of child abuse. Not just in their chart or school records but to a national data base .In this way potential problems could be addressed before a crisis develops. Everyone knows kids who they think "are not quite normal" but nothing is reported where it could do good.

Sincerely,

Charles Watson ,Barkhamsted