

As a former Pennsylvania resident, moving to Connecticut was a shock from the tax perspective. Scaling income tax (instead of PA's flat tax for everyone), crazy property taxes (and I lived in Allegheny County in PA, the highest property taxes in the state), and a annual tax on my car??? I pay tax when I purchase the car, as I should, but why do I keep paying annually? Seems like double / triple taxation and MORE.

These new business taxes which will drive large corporations out of Connecticut and prohibit small business from thriving are killing the state. I'm already questioning this decision to move here for work, since my company, whom is a very large economic driver in Danbury/Ridgefield, is no longer sure if this should be a long term thing.

So when these taxes drive out residents, and property values fall, which causes personal wealth to fall, who will pay the taxes then? Another 'Temporary' tax hike that never goes away?

Come on. When I need more money, the first thing I do is look inside to what I'm wasting money on first, I don't go getting 2nd and 3rd 'temporary' jobs to fix a longer term problem.

I expect a great state like Connecticut to do the same.

Thanks.
