

According to a very complete and accurate ranking of Connecticut's fiscal mismanagement practices by Forbe's Magazine, the state stands third from the top of the list of the worst per capita tax load of all states, being topped only by New Jersey and New York. What further testimony is required to establish the fact that our taxes are too high? The Wall Street journal has previously rated our governor the WORST of all of the country's governors and that is certainly part of the problem. Under these circumstances I foresee little or no improvement especially when I see that little or no favorable consideration was ever given to the contents of a fiscally responsible alternative budget prepared by the opposition.

John Seacord

Roxbury