Is there any precedent when a CT State budget - after the bill became law - was re-opened for amendment? For example: go back to a prior example of a CT law when "clean" wills and trusts did not require a probate court's attention by people whose incentive is to maximize their wages absent funds from the state budget! The fee table will not limit the resourceful employee.

Now, my incentive is to move to another state. Many others will follow my example. Then, where will the CT probate courts get their wages?

Such desperate measures suggest strongly that CT is in a death spiral. I will not continue to live here.
